LORD CECIL VISITS WILSON

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 20.—Woodrow Wilson received a call today from Lord Robert Cecil, British proponent of the League of Nations, who is in Washington for a two day stay. Sir Robert was accompanied by his daughter, the former president during the afternoon, visited with him for a while, but later declined to reveal the subjects discussed.

The British leader, who on his arrival here expressed gratification at the reception he had received in various American cities, has an appointment to call tomorrow on President Wilson, which will be his last. Originally, it was intended to have him pay his respects today, but the call was put over for a day.

Sir Robert is the guest here of Henry White, one of the American delegates to the Paris peace conference who entertained tonight at dinner in his honor.

Assign New Lengths For Broadcasting

Commerce Department Issues Tentative List for the Class B Stations—Ten to Each of 5 Zones.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—To clear up the congestion in radio broadcasting, a new schedule of wave lengths, which goes into effect on May 15, went out today from the Department of Commerce, which has been working on the problem ever since the recent National Radio Conference.

Definite wave lengths have been allocated to each of five zones into which the country has been divided, and broadcasting stations will have to adhere to these or else suffer the penalty of loss or suspension of license.

For the Class B stations (the high-power transmitting agencies) there will be ten wave lengths in each zone, and all of these will be adjusted so as not to conflict with any other.

Of the ten zone lengths assigned to Zone 1, which extends from New England through the District of Columbia, three of them, 405, 465 and 482 meters, have been assigned to New York City and Newark. This is because so many persons are served by the stations in the neighborhood, and so much entertainment talent is available. The stations in New York and Newark will have to arrange for division of time.

Other assignments of wave lengths thus far in this zone are:

Springfield, Mass. (Westinghouse station) and Westley Hills, Mass., 337 meters.

Schenectady (General Electric) and Troy (Rensselaer Polytechnic), 180 meters; Philadelphia (Wanamaker's, L. I. S., Strawberry and Clothier), 193 and 395 meters; and Washington (Arlington and Radio Corporation), 135 meters. It is likely that Arlington will have a special wave length and not be forced to divide time with any other station. Wave lengths of 303, 313, 459 meters also are reserved for this zone.

Assignments in the other zones up to this time are:

Zone 2—Pittsburgh, 326; Chicago, 148; Davenport and Des Moines, 484; Detroit and Dearborn, 517; Cleveland and Toledo, 339; Cincinnati, 303; Madison and Minneapolis, 417.

Zone 3—Atlanta, 429; Louisville, 100; Memphis, 500; St. Louis, 546.

Zone 4—Lincoln, Neb., 541; Kansas City, 411; Jefferson City, 451; Dallas and Fort Worth, 475; San Antonio, 185; Denver, 323; Omaha, 527.

Zone 5—Seattle, 492; Portland, 455; Salt Lake City, 312; San Francisco, 199 and 433; Los Angeles, 395 and 193; San Diego, 535.

None of the wave lengths go above 100 meters. This is important to amateurs, as according to a plan proposed to the recent conference, the large stations might have had wave lengths up to 700 meters, which would have necessitated the changing over of many receiving sets.

Besides the Class B stations which broadcast to long distance, there are 140 Class A stations which use the 350 meter wave length. These will be

Health, Wealth and Happiness

BY MAURICE HENLE
(Special to The Bee.)
CLEVELAND, April 21.—With music—

You can tap the vast resources of your subconscious self.

You can soothe your pains.

You can treble your appreciation of life.

You can almost control your destiny.

So says C. C. Birchard, music publisher of Boston, who spoke to the music supervisors' national conference here.

"Consider the case of Dr. Emil Coue," Birchard told me. "I believe he rather lost out with the American public. Why?

"His theory is sound basically. He says there is a point midway between our conscious self and our subconscious self, and that just before we fall asleep we pass through that stage, which is the closest we can reach to our subconscious self.

"But he didn't explain how we may reach that state. Some think he doesn't know. I believe he must. But he didn't explain to us.

Music Does It.

"Now we come to music. Go to a concert, an opera. Listen. Allow yourself to be carried away by the rhythm. Love it. Breathe the spirit of it. If you do this you will find yourself in a deep state of consciousness.

"You will feel almost—as if you are leaving your body. But don't allow yourself to go to sleep. Tell your conscious mind: 'I will not go to sleep.'

"But you will be close to your subconscious mind, that strange, that is nine-tenths of us. Reach that stage and you can talk to your subconscious self.

"You can determine to do such-and-such a thing, and you will see your body to accomplish it."

He said the Wilhelm Music.

"But," I asked, "can a person

STATES VIEWS OF JAPANESE ON MANDATES

(By The Associated Press.)
GENEVA, April 20.—Mitsuehiro Adachi, Japanese member of the League of Nations council, declared during the council's discussion today of the status of mandated peoples, that in keeping with the spirit of the league covenant no action should be taken toward preventing mandated peoples eventually standing independently by themselves.

This statement bearing upon Japan's attitude toward the inhabitants of the former German islands in the Pacific under her mandate, including the island of Yap, in which the United States is especially interested, was interpreted here as a public reiteration of Japan's intention not to obstruct independence for the islands under such mandate nor of the equator when it is considered the proper time arrives.

Resolutions before the council which were referred to the drafting committee to be remodeled in form provide that the native inhabitants of mandated territories should be granted a special national status distinct from that of nationals of the mandatory powers, although natives may voluntarily acquire the nationality of the mandatory power.

Sir James Allen, high commissioner for New Zealand in London, referred to the American attitude in the Philippines, pointing out that although the Americans had conquered the islands they did not insist upon the Philippines upon taking American nationality but granted them a special status.

STOCK MARKET

(By The Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, April 21.—Selling pressure was resumed at the opening of the stock market and prices continued to sag. Losses of a point each were recorded by United States Steel, National Enamel, Phillips Petroleum and Crucible Steel. Other recent favorites lost ground but rails again offered better resistance to selling pressure. There were some strong spots, most conspicuous of which were Dupont up 2 1/2 and Stuart Warner 1.

Good Morning Judge!

"Stick to the end," was the slogan of Police Officer O. W. Bates early this morning, for he not only stuck to the end of his adventure, but held to the tail of a horse, which dragged him through a branch, weeds, bushes and a chain of events to bring the animal to a halt. The occasion was a chase after the horseback rider who had five gallon cans which he thought to have contained corn liquor under each arm tied in a secure manner. The man, a negro, finally made his getaway, although some undergrowth, throwing Bates sprawling, over and over on the ground. It was a good try but the officer's efforts went to naught.

The act was staged in a remote section of Jackson Branch early this morning. Sergeant J. H. Martin had received a message that should he go to a certain place, a load of whiskey would be by shortly. He called Officer Bates and W. B. Foster waiting in the bushes by the roadside a short time, a negro, William Harrison, came along and was halted. He was searched and a pint of whiskey was found in his pocket. He was arrested and turned over to Officer Foster. Foster took his prisoner and hid in the undergrowth to await still another whiskey law violator. Presently another negro, Frank Anderson, approached and he was also nabbed, a quart of whiskey being found in his possession. With two arrests already to their credit, the officers still declined to leave the scene. Their information was that it was a load of whiskey and not mere pint and quart quantities, which was expected along. Still hiding, the officers' attention was attracted by the patter of hoofs of a horse. They crouched back and a bay horse made its appearance. The rider, a negro, with two large cans strapped under each arm, caught sight of the police and suddenly turned his horse towards the branch.

Knowing Bates to be fast in such situations, Sergeant Martin shouted, "Catch him, Bates." No sooner had the words left his mouth than Bates had made a dash for the animal, which he was in the middle of the creek. Bates made a plunge and grabbed the animal by the tail. This was as near as he could get. The officer held to what he had, thick and thin—through the creek, up the embankment, over rocks and gulleys and through bushes. In the meantime the rider was making every effort to make the animal put on all speed. Despite this Bates held fast, until he struck a bush and was forced to let the animal go. He returned to the other two officers a terrible looking sight with a grin on his face but one which recorded disappointment in failing to land his prisoner. The negro on the horse vanished down the creek, but the officers will know him if they see him again. The cans he carried are said to have been of five-gallon capacity each.

At that the officers thought it a good day and returned to the police station with their other two prisoners in time for the session of the police court. Both negroes were dealt with on the liquor charges.

Harrison was fined $51 and costs and sentenced to thirty days in jail for having his pint, while Anderson, who had a quart, was fined a similar amount and given the same term in jail. The sentences in each case were suspended, owing to the small quantity of liquor involved.

Other Court Proceedings.

T. P. Walters, at whose house three stills were found by police officers, was fined $51 and costs and sentenced to serve six months in jail. An appeal was noted. One of the stills showed signs of having been used to make liquor but the other two were new.

The case of Oscar Hamilton, charged with an alleged assault on S. A. Patterson, was continued until Monday.

Joe Hairston, colored, drew a fine of $5 and costs on a charge of "loitering."

This wound up the docket in court for the day.

Curtis Dodson Weds Miss Louise Snow

(Special to The Bee.)
ST. FERNANDINA, Fla., April 21.—Curtis Dodson, of Danville, Va., and Miss Louise Snow Davis, of the same place, were united in marriage Wednesday night at the Methodist church, Rev. W. W. Sturdivant, pastor of the church, officiating. After the ceremony, which was held at 8 o'clock, a reception was held and after Mr. and Mrs. Dodson returned to Jacksonville, where they will reside for the time being, they will return to Danville where they are planning to reside.

Mr. Dodson is a native of Danville, Va., and has been in the service of the U. S. Navy for several years. Miss Snow is a native of Danville, Va., and has been in the service of the U. S. Navy for several years.

MAJOR BYNUM WILL LEAVE FISHBURNE

By George H. Manning
WASHINGTON, April 20.—Orders were issued by the War Department today relieving Major James F. Bynum, Infantry, from detail as chief of military exercises and tactics, Fishburne Military School, at Wanesboro, Virginia, effective at the end of the present school year, assigning him to duty with the Third Division.

He is directed to report at San Francisco from where he will proceed to Alaska for service with the Third Division.

CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT IS BRANCHING IN NEW DIRECTION

Co-operative marketing is branching out in other directions. The latest development of the union movement is reported from Patrick, Tenn., where the growers of tobacco affiliated with the Co-operative Marketing Association have formed an inter-organization which aims at the purchase of needed supplies by the farmer direct from the sources of supply, thereby eliminating the middleman and saving the Patrick men many thousands of dollars.

George Biggs of Shuff has been appointed purchasing agent for the new association in which, it is said, nine per cent. of the "co-op" members have membership. Thus far the movement has been restricted to the purchase of seeds and fertilizer. The latter product has been secured. It is said from eight to ten dollars per ton, whereas the catalogue price delivered at any point on the Danville and Western Railway.

Some of the quotations given to the new Patrick organization through the buying of material in gross are as follows:

16 per cent. acid phosphate, $16.00 per ton.

2-8-2 sulphate of potash, $25.00 per ton.

3-8-3 sulphate potash, $28.50 per ton.

All other fertilizer in proportion to above prices.

Soy Beans, Mammoth Yellow, per bushel $2.00.

Cow peas, ranging per bushel from $1.10 to $2.10.

CITY SCHOOLS ACTIVELY AT WORK ON MAY DATE FETE

As the date of the city schools May Day fete nears, activity is being observed in all of the public institutions—Stonewall Jackson, Robert E. Lee, Bellevue and Rison Park.

Each afternoon the teachers have their respective groups out for rehearsal. Folk dances will be pretty popular from the angle of perfection and costume. All the schools are asking the parents of the children who are taking part to make special dresses and suits for the occasion. It is planned to have a parade on the field that day so that the children will be able to not only enjoy the dances but carry out the steps in accordance with the music.

Invoices Confirm Increase In Cost

That building prices have materially increased—more than 50 per cent. over those obtaining this time last year—is well established by a comparison of vouchers and invoices made by a local builder since a conflict of opinion as to such costs arose here recently. The result of the comparison rather indicates that the prospective builder who thought it advisable to wait until this spring to carry out some building project would have done better to have launched it before the advent of last winter for it is largely since then that the demand for necessary material has resulted in the present higher quotations.

According to the comparisons made there has been no advance in Danville on roofing material no advance in lime and cement and the local brick manufacturers have not advanced the price of their product although in other places all three have advanced.

The comparison shows that frame lumber which this time last year sold at $26.50 per thousand feet now sells at $37.50; flooring last year $55, this year $75; dressed lumber $57 last year $84 this year. All work, the comparison shows, has advanced 20 per cent; steel and iron, 20 per cent; hardware 30 per cent. The costs of labor naturally enter into the increased cost of building. Brick masons today are getting 25 cents an hour more than they obtained last year, carpenters 10 cents an hour more and common labor five cents per hour more. Plumbing has advanced 30 per cent, the comparison table indicates while heating is up 75 per cent. These increases, it is pointed out are not considered arbitrary but are the natural reflex action from the increased demand now that the building boom has started throughout the nation. In the case of heating, the unusual reported increase is ascribed as due to the shortage of steel and the increased wages paid in the steel mills.

Dismiss Motion Made To Dissolve An Injunction

MARTINSVILLE INTERESTED IN ALLEGED POLITICAL SURVEY

(Special to The Bee.)
MARTINSVILLE, Va., April 21.—Within the past few days a number of large circulars have been placed in circulation in this town, these purporting to make a complete expose of the removal from office of T. H. Self, Democrat, postmaster of the town for the past three years and who was ousted one year before the completion of his full four year term on charges preferred by J. G. Hagy, postoffice inspector.

The circular is full newspaper size and contains six columns. While it bears no imprimatur nor is given the names of the persons responsible for its publication, it is patent that it is the work of friends of Mr. Self, who felt that while many were familiar with the circumstances of his removal, the general public did not and it was for that purpose that the sheet has been put into circulation.

The most interesting feature perhaps is the inclusion of several additional "Dear Ben" letters, letters purporting to be signed by Dr. C. P. Smith, Henry County Republican chairman, whose son, C. P. Smith, Jr., was appointed to the postmastership just as soon as Mr. Self had been ousted. These letters, it is claimed were furnished by the recipient, none other than Ben Powell of Gretna, of hump-shell fame in Washington, D. C. The circular also gives the text of the charges filed against Mr. Self and his reply thereto, the document finally concluding the expose in the following language:

"Mr. Self says he is leaving the service with a clear conscience of duty well performed and without regrets to worry or apologies to make for the character of service rendered the Postoffice Department and the patrons of the Martinsville postoffice. He believes his displacement to be a part of the disgraceful scheme for the barter and sale of Virginia post-offices."

On January 4th, 1923, Mr. Self received a letter from the Postoffice Department, Martinsville, Va., Jan. 4, 1923. "Subject: Notification of charges, etc. Mr. Thomas H. Self, Postmaster, Martinsville, Va."

"My dear Sir.—Charges have been preferred against you as follows:

"That you have made a family affair of the office in that your only son is in the railway mail service and that three of Clark family have been connected with your family by two marriages are in the service, two of them connected with this postoffice and the last one having been appointed."

Martinsville, Va., April 21.—The charges leveled in Hagy's letter and "flooded" the names of persons who could give further substantiation to his denial. Only two members of Mr. Self's family were appointed to postoffice positions, one of them named nearly three years before Mr. Self became postmaster and the other being appointed as a substitute worker in accordance with his rating following a civil service examination. As to the charges that he had attended a political meeting, Mr. Self admitted participating in a mass meeting, asserting however, that he was not made secretary as after being nominated he declined to serve, knowing that he could not do so under the civil service rules.

Mr. Self denied specifically the charges leveled in Hagy's letter and "flooded" the names of persons who could give further substantiation to his denial. MOVIE TICKETS DRAW BIG TAX

WARSAW, April 21.—Movie tickets in Warsaw are taxed 100 per cent. and as a protest to the authorities all the movie houses recently got together and closed. The government is losing 20,000,000 Polish marks a day as a result.

The authorities came back with an order on the movie men to reopen at once, or have their premises confiscated for use as schools. Public opinion, however, is with the picture men, and it is believed the dispute will be compromised by the collection of a 50 per cent. tax.

Annual Dinner Of Chamber Held Here Last Night

More than three hundred diners sat down to an excellently prepared and efficiently served banquet last night in banquet hall of the Masonic Temple, the occasion being the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, the city's oldest and most influential business organization now in the most vital stage of its long career. The bright, particular feature of the evening was the annual address to the Chamber of President Charles O. Eaton, of the American Education Association, a gentleman of handsome and commanding appearance and a thoughtful, forceful and eloquent speaker. His address which occupied perhaps an hour in its delivery was an epochal one in its standard of patriotism and its appeal for self-help and development, and it was frank and bold in its delineation of the insidious dangers of socialism, by whatever name or differentiation, which has honeycombed the civilization and is sapping the strength of Europe and is steadily but industriously and persistently seeking to undermine the sturdy strength of this young republic.

This address was the climax of an unusually interesting dinner in which incidentally all present were provided with an epitome of the year's work of the Chamber and an enumeration of the things and thoughts for the attainment of which it will strive during the ensuing year. A regrettable circumstance was the unavoidable absence of President William P. Boatwright and also of the First Vice President L. B. Conway, but in their absence Second Vice President James T. Ceelin, Jr., presided with dignity and distinction and was happy in the presentation of the several speakers. President Boatwright's report was not presented, but that of Secretary Henry B. W. was fully and carefully covered the year's activities of the body.

The dinner itself, served in the capacious and beautiful refectory of the new temple, the city's latest architectural ornament and utility, was an appetizing and excellent one and was served with efficiency and grace by a bevy of well known young ladies under the direction of a group of their elders. The menu is herewith given.

Fruit cocktail—Salted almonds—Mixed pickles

Cranberry jelly
Baked chicken with dressing and giblet gravy
Smithfield ham
Candied sweet potatoes
French peas
Parker-house rolls, hot butter
Tea
Pineapple combination salad
Brick ice cream
Home-made cakes

The blessing before the dinner was invoked by the Rev. Joseph Dunghlin, son, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, who had arrived in the city only a few hours before.

After the dinner the list of three-tor elected or appointed several months ago, as follows: W. P. Boatwright, L. B. Conway, J. R. Catlin, Jr., C. L. Booth, C. G. Holland, A. B. Carrington, W. B. Gardner, M. O. Nelson, J. T. Penn, L. Kaufman, A. B. Carrington, Sr., W. B. Jordan, John B. Harvie, J. M. Seegar, A. D. Starling, R. W. Jones, A. B. Crowell, A. H. Taylor.

After attention had been directed to the report of the executive secretary, presented in printed form, a series of presentations followed. First former President A. B. Carrington, presented to the Chamber in a neatly framed form the cancelled note which the Chamber had underwritten in the movement to present to the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia the Danville Military Institute free of debt the splendid educational plant donated to that body and dedicated to education of youth. The next gift was the framed note for $15,000 which the Chamber had pledged itself to raise by subscription for the construction of links of improved roadway connecting this city with trunkline roads in every direction. This handsome achievement is one of the outstanding achievements of the Chamber, the movement having been undertaken during the incumbency of President Frank Talbot and carried to completion under the administration of his successors.

Director C. G. Holland, one of the prime movers in the effort to secure improvement of connecting links of outlying roadway in this vicinity, then made a pleasing presentation to A. D. Starling of a handsome silver water set, consisting of silver ewer and goblets, as a substantial expression of the Chamber's appreciation of his aggressive and successful leadership as chairman of the good roads committee in the achievement of such permanently valuable and important results. The speaker enumerated the roads improved and paid a handsome tribute to Mr. Starling for his unselfish devotion to this important undertaking. In acknowledging the gift, Mr. Starling disclaimed being a politician, as he has been playfully referred to by another speaker by asserting that he lacked the fundamental qualification of a politician, the gift of the graces of public speech. Nevertheless he made a very pleasing response in which he stated that he had promised his wife just such a gift some day and was happy that he was now enabled to keep that promise.

H. R. Fitzgerald, Danville's foremost citizen, was then presented to introduce the speaker of the evening, Dr. Charles O. Eaton, and discharged that duty in a brief, but earnest and ed his kindly and friendly feeling for the city of Danville.

Dr. Eaton acknowledged the honor of the invitation to him and expressed in a happy manner with a handsome appeal to the homogeneity and patriotism of the people of the South, although he was employed in New York city and lived in a small New Jersey suburb of that city. In a previous incarnation, he felt, he must have once lived here, and in coming back here from Manhattan he said he felt like the coming back to America. He paid a fine appreciation to the homogeneity and patriotism of the people of the South and particularly those of the great Piedmont section along the line of the Southern railway. He was glad to note that the people of Danville were getting more and more the good road habit, and he regarded this as the most hopeful region of this country and the great bulwark of pure American stock upon which the safety and salvation of this country ultimately depends. He praised the industrial aptness of the great Danville textile plant and its adoption widely as a preventive of industrial mills of every kind. Declaring himself an optimist as a result of the broader knowledge he had gained of people generally in his own work in various sections of this country, he added that he made it a habit of never finding a bad thing in a man, if he can find a good thing. Reverting to the industrial life from Europe was suffering and from time to time sections of this country suffered, he cited leadership and education as the only sure and effective cure for industrial ills.

America, he said, was at the crossroads of destiny. The history of man is the story of human progress, and he believed that God never fails. After citing his own experience and observation of men in many places, he declared that honest, courageous and unselfish leadership and the development of the minds and capacities and the ambition of men

Man Forced to Court Own Wife

By ROY GIBBONS
(Special to The Bee)

CHICAGO, April 21.—Facing John H. Dudley here is the most unusual problem of courting that ever confronted a lover's swain.

For it's up to Dudley to woo and win his own legally wedded wife. That sentence has been imposed on him by a Chicago court.

If Dudley's wooing wins—then wife, home and happiness will be his.

And if it fails—Mrs. Dudley will be allowed unrestrained to live at the home of her parents while Dudley in loneliness files his own breakfast bacon and longs for the life that might have been.

A few days ago Dudley and Helen Peterson, 18, felt the lure of spring, went to Crown Point, Indiana's Gretna Green, and were married.

But within a week married life irked the youthful bride and Dudley found himself alone in his little flat.

Straightway hastened Dudley into court. Helen's parents, he declared, were holding the bride incommunicado against her will. And the husband demanded a writ of habeas corpus.

Came into court the bride and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Peterson, accompanied by the sheriff.

"I don't love John," said a wife should," the bride testified. "I hadn't time to marry him at all. But it was a nice day and I was passing his house on my way to work, so I thought I'd just stop in and say hello."

"And he said: 'Let's get married.' It was such a nice day to work. So we went to Crown Point. I left him of my own free will a week later."

Then Helen's mother broke in.

"The marriage was not the act of God," she interposed. "Helen will get rid of her husband as quietly as possible, and go away as a missionary."

along constructive lines, he mentioned his association with Charles M. Schwab, great steel magnate and reviewed his career from its humble, unassuming beginning to his great achievement and his large influence in the country's industrial life.

In the further course of his address, he cited the effort of this country to build a great fleet of ocean transports for our war emergency and its splendid and encouraging beginning, which he attributed to lack of the stimulative and commanding leadership and to the solution of this problem when such leadership was provided. Incidentally it developed that he himself had had an influential part in organizing and giving confidence and inspiration to the work-material.

Dr. Eaton warned Americans against the dangers of bolshevism and socialism with its paralyzing effects on industry and production and its destruction of initiative and ambition and in this connection paid his respects to what he termed parlor socialism, meaning the faddists in high society who were promoting this dangerous and poisonous growth.

In the concluding portion of the address, the speaker made an appealing presentation of the unlimited opportunities presented to youth and young men and women in this country, and cited some inspiring instances to show what had been accomplished by men who began obscurely and without promising environment or influences, but who had achieved splendid and noble results by and through their own self-development of intellectual and moral strength and a broader vision of mankind and of the possibilities of their country. An eloquent plea for steadfast adherence to high principles, noble ideals and the vision of large service and for an alert, undeviating patriotism as a means of preserving this land of opportunity and attaining its world-mission brought a notably clean, clear and forceful address to its close.

In the course of his address a reference to Woodrow Wilson evoked a general, spirited and prolonged tribute to the ex-president, the duration and the spontaneity of which evidently came as a surprise to the speaker, addressing an audience of Virginians as he was.

SHIPBOARD WILL NOT SET MINIMUM PRICE

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 20.—In lines with its policy to allow considerable latitude in prices as well as in conditions of operation and payment in the bids submitted for the consolidated routes now operated by the Shipping Board, it was learned today that no minimum price will be set. The board will interpret the term "as justifiable" as used in the White House statement connection with the proposed sale, as dealing as much with the guarantees to be required as with the amount offered.

Based on the world market, the Shipping Board has insisted for more than a year upon a minimum of at least $30 a ton from bidders for individual ships from the government fleet. This fleet has been in effect board took office and there has been no essential change in that time in the world market price for typical commercial tonnage.

With regard to the routes, however, the board considers that it faces a difficult problem through the condition which necessarily have been attached to their disposal. It was concluded, officials said today, that a prospective operator would hesitate to tie his hands through the purchase contract required in order to run a route if he could obtain individual ships at a set price and run them how and when he pleased. To remove this impediment the board was understood to have decided against setting any deadline in the matter of prices for "wing routes."

MRS. HELEN DUDLEY

JOHN H. DUDLEY

"Case dismissed," announced Judge Sabath. "I don't believe this girl is being held against her will. So I'm not going to issue any writ." And then—

"John, it is spring and love is in the air. Start courting your wife all over. You may send her flowers and candy and take her to the theater."

"Be gentle. Try the romance of Shakespeare. Cavenham tactics will not do. Consider yourself a lover and not a husband. I give you one month in which to pay your court. Then come back here, both of you. Let me know then how you feel about the situation."

And now Dudley's playing Romeo.

EPIDEMIC ON WANE,
(Special to The Register)
RICHMOND, Va., April 20.—The measles epidemic here is thought to be on the wane as the number of cases is being reduced daily with a decrease in the number of new cases. It is believed that there have been about 1,000 cases here in the last month or six weeks but no deaths have been reported.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED
(By The Associated Press)
DRESDEN, April 20.—The engagement is announced of Princess Elizabeth Helene, only daughter of the Prince of Thurn and Taxis, to Prince Friedrich Christian, second son of King Friedrich August 8rd of Saxony. The Princess is 19 years of age and her fiancé is 28.

D. A. R. TO VISIT HISTORIC HOME

By GEORGE H. MANNING
WASHINGTON, April 20.—The Washington-Lewis Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of Fredericksburg, Virginia, has extended an invitation to all the delegates attending the annual convention here of the D. A. R. to visit historic "Chatham" on Stafford Heights near Fredericksburg, next Tuesday.

Colonel and Mrs. D. B. Devore will entertain at luncheon in the old manor house, built in 1727, where General Lee met and won the beautiful great-granddaughter of George Washington's wife, Nellie Custis. "Chatham" will observe "open house" throughout the day.

Relics of George and Martha Washington-Lewis Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, are on display in the museum. They include vest buttons worn by General Washington; a Spanish silver dollar dated 1786, given by Washington to his family physician, Dr. Henry Frantz, and knitting needles used by Martha Washington at Mount Vernon.

LONDON—The British Indian authorities have undertaken negotiations for the release of Molly Eids, the fifteen-year-old girl who was kidnapped some time ago by Afghan tribesmen, says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Allahabad.

DODGE BROTHERS TYPE-A SEDAN

Dependability is taken for granted—its economy of operation is proverbial.

Comfort, as a rule, is directed to the richness of its fittings, and the dignified beauty of its coachwork.

This beauty is not a superficial thing. It goes much deeper than mere external adornments.

Like all creations of genuine excellence, it emanates from the honest value which Dodge Brothers have built into the car.

You sense it in the depth and comfort of the seats—richly upholstered in genuine mohair velvet. It makes itself known the instant you close the doors—which snap solidly shut, like the doors of a safe. It emanates unmistakably from every line and curve of the sturdy body.

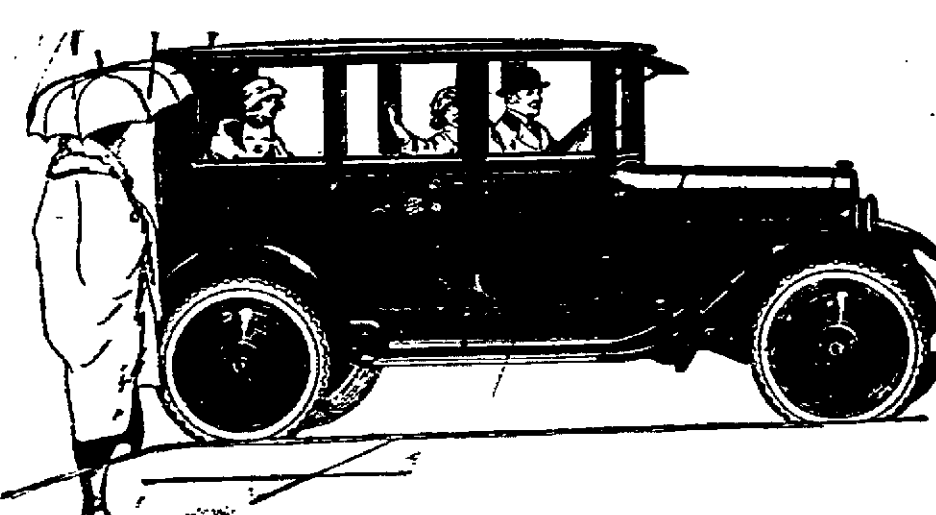

It becomes most evident when you discover that in smart company, where a car of less distinction would appear at its worst, Dodge Brothers Type-A Sedan appears at its best.

The Price Is $1,315.00 delivered.

High School Gives Minstrel That Is Above Average

The Danville High School minstrel show at the Majestic Theatre last night was not only a splendid performance, enjoyed by a crowded house, but it exemplified what high school students can do if they work hard enough. And work they did for a show as good as the one given last night cannot be produced without hard work and more of it. Of course there must be talent, and there is but it's the work, the hard work, that counts. The show was also presented at a matinee yesterday afternoon to a large audience.

Those who have seen High School minstrel productions for the past several years are unanimous in saying that the last is the best show ever given by local students. Part 1 of the show is especially to be commended. This part was in conventional minstrel style and setting, with end men, interactor and specialty men. For the opening chorus a medley of familiar songs was rendered in a manner as to lead no doubt that the choristers had been well trained and had responded admirably to the training. The musical selections which interspersed the songs, were given with telling effect; the boys were inspired of their work and handled their parts like oldtimers.

Frank Campbell and Willoughby Frazer divided and men honors with Champ Broadus and St. Clair Winkler. Horace Bass was interactor. This quintette did all, and more, that could be expected of a group of high school students. The show was a real treat, and the boys were well trained and had responded admirably to the training. The musical selections which interspersed the songs, were given with telling effect; the boys were inspired of their work and handled their parts like oldtimers.

There was variety and change of pace in the musical selections. "Sam" in imitable dandy dialect that called for a number of encores. "Freddie" Morgan, with "Cow Bells" and a running voice reminded one of howling herds at eventide, tinkling their way to the barn. "Jim" took a leading role in the "Mama Every Night" in a way that was almost like a benediction—and one wonders if it were not an improvement over the conventional rendition. "Bud" Winkler put across "Somebody Lied" with a fervor and feeling almost like a benediction—and one wonders if it were not an improvement over the conventional rendition.

SCIENCE DEFEATS DENTIST'S SCHEME TO ESCAPE CHAIR

(Special to The Bee.)
NEW YORK, April 21.—"When Dr. Arthur Waite, a New York dentist, was sent to the electric chair for the poisoning of his father-in-law, the scientific investigation of crime won one of its most famous victories."

This is the statement of Dr. Otto H. Schultze, medical assistant to the New York district attorney, whom The Bee has just revealed as the original of "Craig Kennedy, scientific detective," Arthur B. Reeve's fiction hero.

The first suspicion that Waite's father-in-law, who died after a long illness, had come to his end through unnatural cause was when a telegram, "suspicions aroused, insist on investigation" was received by the son of the deceased. The telegram was signed with a fictitious name.

The death certificate giving typhoid as the cause of death had already been written out and advanced to the coroner's office. The mission to remove the body from New York to Grand Rapids, where it was to be cremated.

Acting on this telegram the son of the deceased, Dr. Arthur Waite, had his family physician perform an autopsy. The physician removed the stomach, sent it to Ann Arbor for analysis, and was informed that the analysis disclosed the presence of arsenic.

"Now Waite, defending himself against a charge of administering arsenic to the deceased, could escape if he could prove that the presence of arsenic was due to the old man's fluid or by proving that the dead man had been a habitual user of arsenic."

"We later learned that he had attempted to bribe the undertaker to certify that arsenic had been used in the embalming fluid."

"But science closed the opportunities to escape in either of these directions. Parts of the vital organs were shipped back to New York, where we submitted them to chemical analysis and microscopic examination."

"This examination disclosed the presence of arsenic in crystalline form. The largest amount was in the stomach. A smaller amount was taken a leading role follow:

Part two was a artful little sketch, a dialogue, between "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Sheen," two very black Irishmen who had a peddled club that struck in time. The words were written by Harry Wooding Spencer and were clever. Mr. Gallagher was Hump Campbell, Mr. Sheen was Champ Broadus, and these two young men maintained the skit delightfully.

There followed a number labeled "Chalk Chatter," wherein Billy Jefferson displayed no little ability as a cartoonist. Comical figures were drawn with a dash and ease that bespoke real talent. Joe Trundle and Hazel Davis as Banjo Ben and Saxophone Sam entertained the audience with a number of "toe-ticking" numbers.

The last part of the show was a playlet, "The African Golf Club." The name is suggestive of the playlet, not wrong. Blackface is in its proper setting. Rolling the bones was sufficient excuse for a lot of wit and humor that kept the audience amused throughout. The characters in this part follow:

Bill Bailey (who sings) a mean domino, Champ Broadus. Sam Bailey (an expert golfer like-wise), Leonard Jennings. Mose Johnson (another member of the club), Garland Clark. Jasper Lee (another), Foley Smith. Rufus Brown (one more), J. D. Rogers. Rastus White (still another), Julian Adams.

Parson Jones (a colored minister), James Shelburne. Mandy Jones (the parson's wife), Bud Winkler. Slyfoot (a roustabout), Hump Campbell. Sugarfoot (another), Willoughby Frazer. Ambrose Magruder (a colored constable), Garnet Adams.

Liquid Fuel In The Intake System

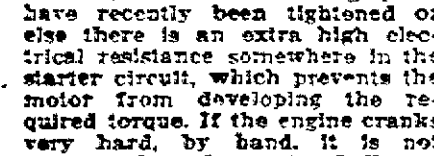

AFTER AN ENGINE has been running idle for some time or has been throttled down closely and moving its car at very slow speed, it often happens that, when the throttle is suddenly opened to accelerate, there is quite a pert of missing, possibly a puff of smoke and considerable black smoke in the exhaust. The engine is said to "choke and sputter" and the cause of the trouble is generally that the manifold contains a large quantity of liquid gasoline, which, when the throttle is opened is suddenly sucked into the cylinders, "flooding" them and temporarily producing a mixture too rich to explode—at least regularly, and often fouling the plugs. The reason for this collection of unvaporized gasoline is that, when an engine is closely throttled, the rate of flow of air through the carburetor is so low and the suction on the carburetor-jet is so weak, that there is no actual atomizing of fuel into fine particles and very slight mixing action, due to air motion. Gasoline simply "dribbles" out of the carburetor standpipes and settles upon the walls of the piping, collecting in puddles upon the lower surfaces of the manifold, which is often too cold to evaporate any of the liquid, except its most volatile portions. Upon the opening of the throttle, there is a sudden violent rush of air through the piping, which catches up the collected fuel and sweeps it into the cylinders, producing therein an immense excess of combustible, with results as stated above. When the carburetor is mounted directly upon the cylinder-block, as in most recent engines, the manifold is within the casting, and is heated enough, by the surrounding warm jacket water to reduce the loading evil, but in several exposed manifolds loading takes place, especially when the engine is cold. The hot spot manifold, with a portion of its wall heated by exhaust gas, the combination intake and exhaust manifold, having one hot wall common to both, are expedients for preventing the collection and retention of liquid fuel in the intake. The use of a carburetor so designed that, even when throttled, the air has a high velocity past the jet and the jet has a vigorous spraying action, tends to minimize "loading". The motorist who owns a car, the engine of which suffers from loading after being run throttled, should give the intake more heat and perhaps consider a more modern carburetor.

WEAK STARTER MOTOR

B. E. writes: Of late, my starting motor will not crank the engine. It turns until the pinion meshes and then stops. If I press the starting button when the lights are on, they go out. I am sure that the battery is charged and that the starter drive is all right. What is the matter?

Answer: Either the engine turns over abnormally hard, perhaps because some of its moving parts have recently been tightened or else there is an extra high electrical resistance somewhere in the starter circuit, which prevents the required torque. If the engine cranks very hard, it is not strange that the motor balks at turning it over. Imperfect connections of the battery cables to the battery terminals, to the ground on the frame or to the starter switch, or bad connections in the switch itself or at the brushes of the motor, would introduce excessive resistance. While the battery may have been given the full charge which it will take, deterioration of the plates will deprive it of the power to supply the immense current required in starting.

ROADSIDE RADIATOR REPAIRS

S. A. W. writes: Twice, when my car was on the road the radiator commenced to leak. What is the best way to stop these leaks?

Answer: Applying thick white lead or red lead freely around the point of escape often works well and in the case of hose connections, putty pressed into the leaking cells from both front and back, generally proves effective. Plaster of Paris in the form of a thick paste can also be used and we have seen temporary repairs made with heavy cup grease.

Questions of general interest to the motorist will be answered by Mr. Clough in this column, space permitting. If an immediate answer is desired, enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

By Stanley

A COMMON-SENSE COURT DECISION.

(Greensboro News)
A Virginia judge has held that a life insurance company has a right to true information concerning the employment and place of residence of the insured, and if false information is furnished the courts, in the event of the death of the insured, will not compel the company to pay the face of the policy.

The case grew out of the claim of a negro who had insured the life of his son, but neglected to inform the insurance company that his son was then serving a life term for murder. Only after his death did the insurer discover that he was a convict in the Virginia penitentiary.

The common sense of the court's decision stands out conspicuously, especially in view of recent developments in the south. A convict is a bad risk in any case; but particularly bad if it is his misfortune to be incarcerated in a southern prison. Such a man is the plain lesson of what has recently been said about the prison systems of Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Florida. In addition to the ordinary risks of confinement, there is the "whipping boys" ready to murder the victim in peculiarly atrocious fashion.

As long as flogging is a legal punishment in the south, convicts in southern prisons will be no risks for properly conducted life insurance companies to assume.

DANCING TESTS NARROW DOWN

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 20.—Washington's two marathon dancing contests which got under way two nights ago with 27 entries had simmered down tonight to a slim endurance test between seven men.

The last of 14 women contestants collapsed on the floor, exhausted and hysterical after 43 hours of continuous shuffling.

Aubrey Gilbert, a Marine from Clarkdale, Miss., and Josef Soltz, a former cavalry man, passed the fifty-hour mark at one hall while the five men at another hall had danced continuously for 48 hours at midnight.

Marine officers from the barracks were called in to examine and examine him tonight and pronounced him in "fighting form." He was told not to report until he had captured "the bacon."

A bunch of business men in Phoenix, Ariz., have put their heads together to make cement.

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO SYDNEY CARTON

DEAR SYD:

I hope you can understand, old chap, what you have done. Or, I hope I can make you understand what my guilty conscience has done, as you would put it.

I do not think Leslie will ever forgive me. And it all came about that letter you wrote me and which I received this morning.

There was nothing in it but the various commonplaces, nothing that anyone might not read, but you see, old fellow, I could not be sure that you would not say something in the letter about the fact that I was in which I told you of my interview with Leslie's father.

Leslie had not known that I had even written to you and when she saw the letter she was in a state of mind to open the envelope, before I thought I snatched it from her. Then, of course, I had to play out the same as I had dealt the cards.

I will not deny, Syd, that I was awfully angry. I don't think it is any woman's business, whether she is your wife, your mother, your stenographer or your mistress, to open your personal mail.

I expect I told this to Leslie in a very cruel manner, for she ended by demanding the letter from me that she might read its contents.

If I had had any sense, knowing you had made no illusion whatever to anything compromising, I would have given it to her then and there, but I was too furious. The matter ended by me dramatically striking a match and trying to burn the d— thing before her eyes.

Sets the Stylus

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon has selected this suit as her going away outfit following her marriage to the Duke of York. Her selections will bear great influence on the fashions of Englishwomen this summer.

A highway is a man who thinks nine tenths of the people are below the average.

Leslie made a dive for the burning letter which in the meantime had dropped on the carpet. Notwithstanding it was blazing she tried to pick it up and, in consequence, burned her hand very badly.

Think of it, Syd, that dear little hand, the hand she had just given me trustfully in token of her devotion, was a wife's hand, named and crippled because of my cursed temper. Call me a brute if you want to. You cannot call me anything worse than I have called myself.

I do not deserve such a wife as Leslie. Even when I knew that her hand was burned I did not stop to comfort her. In French rage I watched that letter burn and then I rushed out and did not return until late in the afternoon. I found when I called to dress Leslie's hand which was badly burned and that she was weeping under an opiate.

New way for a man to end his honeymoon, isn't it?

I am entirely to blame for it, I declare. First, for allowing that you would be so devastatingly under the weather as to write me anything compromising, and, secondly, for informing to the sweetest little girl on earth that she was doing anything wrong in opening any and all my letters.

We are all of us, Syd, we are all of us, the natives and lack of principle that are out to the women we marry.

God knows what I am going to do. I am going to write a letter to you tonight I am groveling in the dust and with the poverty of human nature I am even hoping you will not call it a letter, as being the poorest, although I am sure of all this rubbish.

MONDAY: Leslie Prescott's letter to her mother relates only part of this unfortunate incident.

FEDERAL ACTION AGAINST LIQUOR FLEET IN VIEW

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 20.—Federal action against the rum running fleet operating off the New York-Jersey coast was promised today at the White House, where it was stated that this question was the main topic at today's cabinet meeting.

Details of the government's plans were withheld to avoid, officials said, a premature announcement. It was stated on high authority, however, that the government did not intend to remain inactive against the liquor smuggling fleet if there were any means to prevent it. Confirmed was expressed that some method of dealing with the situation could be found.

Prohibition Commissioner Haynes had advocated the use of light naval vessels against the rum runners but this plan so far has met with opposition from Secretary Denby of the Navy Department on the ground that prevention of liquor smuggling was not a proper naval duty.

HOPE IS ABANDONED FOR EXPLOSION VICTIM

(By The Associated Press)
SEFFNER, Pa., April 20.—Physicians tonight virtually abandoned hope for the recovery of F. B. Akard, one of the four injured today in an explosion of a boiler at a small saw mill here, which resulted in four men being killed instantly. Akard suffered a fractured skull and injuries about his body when he was hurled through the air and landed on a stake, where he remained suspended until he was rescued. The explosion is attributed to a crystallized boiler.

UNFORTUNATE GREED FOR OFFICE.

The "inside" history of the removal of T. H. Self as postmaster of Martinsville, after loyal and conscientious service for three years to make way for a Republican affords another example of Republican methods, the doing out of federal jobs as a reward for the faithful, irrespective of the record of the incumbent. It is just such examples as this which promote uneasiness among civil servants, cause discouragement and make government service, which should be made attractive for efficient men and women a repugnant thing and a class of work to be avoided.

We do not know who is responsible for the circulation of the alleged expose in Martinsville but whoever is responsible for it has done Mr. Self a service in that it will open the eyes of some people who probably were unaware that such things could happen or be tolerated by an administration which claims to make a bid for support on the platform of fair play and honesty.

Mr. Self attended a political meeting in Martinsville which he admittedly did though, the circular declares he took no active part in it, then half the postmasters in the country—Danville's not excepted—are in line for summary removal, on the ground of violating the civil service rules. We venture to say, however, that no official postoffice inspector will be placed on the trail of Mr. Lumpkin; neither will he be called to task for his admitted interest and activity in the Republican party's political organization in this section. That is a weapon which can be used only against Democratic holdovers.

The whole expose is nauseating to a degree and it is likely to cause an unfavorable reaction among Republicans in this district whose sense of fair play and righteous dealing is closer to their conscience than party expediency.

World Court Is Women's Clubs' Aim to End War

ATLANTA, Ga., April 20.—If men differences in outlook alter or if courts are ready to restrain the conduct of the various commonwealths, why not of the various countries?

These questions and others kindred will be asked by Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, of Iowa and Washington, D. C., chairman of the newly created department of international relations in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the biennial convention to be held at Atlanta, Georgia, May 21-24, and 2,000,000 women who compose the organization are expected to have something to do with answering.

World War-Weary
Women are weary of war. The world is weary of war. And yet no one seems anything about it. In the opinion of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which has members in 38 foreign countries, as well as in every State in the Union, is to establish a world court. The way to peace, the Federation believes, is to be found in forming an enlightened public opinion that the people of every country will demand that a peace of law shall be established among nations as it has been among men.

There is no reason why the disputes of nations cannot be settled by impartial tribunals as the disputes of men are settled by courts of law, says Mrs. Towner, who is the wife of former Congressman Towner, of Iowa, and now Governor of Porto Rico.

Studying World Affairs
In encouraging the study of world conditions the International Relations Department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs wishes to inform themselves as to the history and status of international relations and of the world conditions which have followed the war. Women must know world conditions in order to interpret correctly those near home. The more accurate their understanding of international matters the more intelligently will they stand back of diplomatic decisions and help crystallize public sentiment.

The General Federation is now preparing to furnish study programs and reference lists and hopes soon to send out from Washington headquarters a traveling library on foreign relations. Already more than 200 clubs are making international relations a study.

Plans Co-operation
After informing ourselves and working to influence public opinion we will strive to promote better understanding and establish friendly relations between the women of different countries, in all of which we now have club members.

WHISPERING SAGE

HARRY SINCLAIR DRAGO AND JOSEPH MOEL
COPYRIGHT 1933 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Dick Acklin, big boss of the Double A, plots with Bud Bodine, new owner of the old Webster place, to rob the Basques of Paradise Valley of their water supply. Esteban, son of Jose Arrascaeta, riding with a party in an attack on the Double A, is wounded and carried to the home of Acklin. Jose, while searching for Esteban, is shot and killed from ambush. Bodine pursues Mercedes, the daughter of Jose.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY

The horsemen Tuscarora had seen were swifter. Rounding a bend in the road old Peter drove right into them. With a distinct sense of alarm, the girl recognized Bodine. The men with him were little calculated to restore her composure.

Bodine had no intention of letting them go. He knew they were frightened, and he reveled in it. He bent down confidentially. "I lost my head a bit the last time I was at the hacienda. I was as blind as the kid here, I guess. And I'm sorry for what I said; though I ain't sorry I kissed you."

He felt, rather than saw, Mercedes' glance.

"I learnt something that night, though. I'm a peaceable man from now on. I got an injunction yesterday morning in Winnemucca that'll keep anybody from touching that creek for thirty days. Seem to be believin'." I want to show it to you."

Mercedes' eyes snapped. "You waste our time," she said defiantly. "I do not care what you have, or what you say. I know, I do not go with you."

"Oh, yes, you will, Senorita," he smiled. "We can't finish. Now you turn the team around, old graybeard!" he bawled at Uncle Peter.

Blaze and Tuscarora created the rise at that instant and rode rapidly down the draw. They saw the fractious, panicky team with the horsemen trying to turn them.

"Something stirring, all right," Kent called to Blaze. "Better take this gun. I got my rifle."

They were within a hundred yards of the rig before Bodine discovered them.

"What's the big excit?" Blaze demanded in stately tones.

Blaze had recognized Kildare. "I want to go home, Mr. Blaze!" he cried.

It snapped the tension. "It's homes for you, little chief."

Mercedes bit her lip as she saw Kildare lift the blind boy to his horse's back. Why did this man alternately hurt and befriend her? She became conscious of the gradual swing of his horse to a position protecting her from the sinister look of Bodine's companion. Tuscarora's carefully held rifle did not escape her, nor did it escape the attention of Gloomy.

"Ain't you afraid that there gun might go off, you?"

"My name's Kent—and it might," the lover of peace drawled. It brought a laugh from Bodine.

"By the way," Joe went on, addressing the rancher. "Don't you get to thinkin' we're licked because old Jose is gone. I aim to string along for quite some time while yet. I got a 'You're slow' Bodine grinned nastily. "I had my talk with the law yesterday. There won't any body touch that creek for thirty days at least. I'll see that my injunction is renewed, too."

Kent concealed his chagrin with a cackling laugh. But Bodine knew he had given his foe a foil.

"Let's hit dirt," he shouted to his men. He waved his hand at them. Kildare, as he and his followers pulled away.

Tuscarora shook his head. "He sure put one over on the old man that time," he murmured. "That's what he wanted to show you, eh? That injunction? Brand is waiting for me down at the hotel. I'll burn it back to town. You go along to the Rancho."

Blaze hugged Bodine tightly as Kent uttered this dictum. Peter pulled up his horses at the patio gate.

Blaze waved his tiny hand as Blaze walked My Man down past the corral. Mariano, the mozo, lounged against the barn. He took off his hat to Kildare.

"Bad times, these, for the Buena Vista," Blaze said to him. "Madre de Dios, but yes!"

"What would you do, if the 'devils' came?" Blaze asked apprehensively.

"At night the gate es shut, Senor. I sleep outside the Senorita's door."

"Good! Here is a little present for you, Mariano." Kildare took six-gun Tuscarora had lent him from his holster, and handed it to the old man. The servant's dark eyes fairly glistered. He had long since

He put the gun on the table. Basilio had caught the seriousness of the conversation. It kept him silent, though several times he tugged at his sister's skirts as if to catch her attention. Mercedes was so engrossed she paid no heed to the boy until Acklin rode into the patio. "I wanted to tell you some one was coming," the sensitive child whispered in the natural lull of surprise, following the appearance of the Big Boss of the Double A.

Mercedes flashed a quick glance from Acklin to Blaze, who held his position near the table. His face was emotionless. Had he known the rancher was coming? Only by the slightest inclination of her head did she acknowledge the cattle-man's greeting.

"Sorry I couldn't get down to your father's funeral," he said.

The he did not pass Mercedes.

"Your man do very well in your place," she answered.

Acklin looked from Blaze to her, and back again. The little by-play that her words carried was beyond her.

"Better 'drift to the Bull's Head," he said to Blaze.

It was lightly purrled, but carried with it the dismissal of the man on the veranda.

Acklin followed him to where My Man stood. Kildare's stock had taken a decided drop in his mental ledger.

"What kept you down here?" he asked, when they were out of hearing of the girl on the veranda.

Kildare's imagination was equal to the occasion.

"The boys are seen when they were out," he drawled. "I ran into Bodine and six or seven of his men. He didn't have a good excuse for being where he was, so I hung around to keep my eye on him." Blaze jabbed his thumb in the direction of Mercedes. "I didn't tell her."

Acklin began to readjust his notes again, as far as Kildare was concerned.

Acklin was sipping the coffee that had been set out for his hired hand, as Blaze looked back in answer to Kildare's call.

"Sit down, Mercedes," Acklin suggested quietly after he had watched her for a few seconds. "I want to talk to you."

The rancher fell back before the fire in her eyes.

"What the devil—" he began, as he got up; but he did not finish his sentence. He was alone. Mercedes had caught up Basilio and entered the house.

He stood the door. It was locked. So Acklin followed his hired man back to the Bull's Head. Their departing mood permitted of no choice. The candle had scratched them both.

CHAPTER XIX
Melody Finds a Charm

THE Big Boss had his saw in hand, and if Bodine could have seen the unbloody glow with which the cattle-man looked forward to dropping him into space, he would have lost some of his offensive swagger.

Morrow rode up to the Bull's Head about three o'clock in a fine frenzy. He slid from his horse and hammered on the office door.

INSTALLATION OF REV. J. W. LINK

For the Lutheran congregation, Lutherlin avenue, Sunday, April 22, will be a joyful day of special services. At the eleven o'clock morning service Rev. J. W. Link, its first pastor, who has been serving the work since the beginning of the present year, will be regularly installed. Rev. A. D. R. Hancher, of Richmond, Virginia, superintendent of Lutheran missions of the Southeastern district will address the congregation and Rev. J. J. Scherer, D.D., pastor of the large and growing First English Lutheran Church of Richmond, Virginia, will address the pastor. The choir will render "Make a Joyful Noise," by Gustav Hagedorn.

The eight o'clock evening service will be set apart as a celebration of the first year of organization of the congregation. Dr. J. J. Scherer, the principal speaker, will talk upon "Planting the Church." Dr. Scherer is a successful home missionary and one of the leading ministers of his city and church. The music program will consist of a selection by a double male quartet, a solo by Mr. Kingoff, and an anthem, "Teach Me to Love Thee," by Mrs. Link and Messrs. Browder and H.

The Bible school will meet promptly at 9:45 a. m., and the Luther League at 7 p. m. It is hoped that every one of the Lutheran faith and many friends will prepare to enjoy these services with this vigorous and growing mission which has accomplished so much within the past year. A cordial welcome awaits you.

BELIEVE CLARA PHILLIPS NOW IN HONDURAS

(By The Associated Press)
SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 20. — A woman closely resembling Mrs. Clara Phillips, convicted hammer murderer, who escaped from the Los Angeles County jail, is a guest at the Tegucigalpa Hotel Honduras, according to a telegram received here today by Governor Fred Richardson from the State Department at Washington.

The telegram was as follows: "American Legation, Tegucigalpa, Honduras, telegraphs Clara Phillips reported to be Hotel Tegucigalpa under name Mrs. Robert Young, accompanied by a couple registered as Mr. and Mrs. Carson. "If you desire this department to request fugitive provisional arrest and detention with view to extradition to state and add that she had been convicted of murder in California." The governor's office immediately notified the Los Angeles county sheriff of the receipt of the telegram and asked that the governor be formally notified of Mrs. Phillips' conviction if the detention of the suspect in Honduras was desired.

Learn To Dance In Six Lessons! NO. 4—HOW TO LEAD

ARTHUR MURRAY "LEADING."

BY ARTHUR MURRAY
Director, National Institute of Social Dancing.
(Copyright, 1923, NEA Service, Inc.)
"THE secret of being a good leader in dancing is to know exactly how to do each step—and then dance in a decided manner. You must be sure of what you are doing. If you are uncertain as to how the steps are to be done, how is your partner to know?"

If you know the steps and can do them well yourself, then guide your partner firmly with your right arm and hand and she will follow if she knows anything about dancing. There is a mistaken impression that the man must guide by pushing and pulling. This is not necessary if a your partner is a good dancer. The good dancer never thinks of how he is leading his partner; he simply does his own part well.

Hold your right hand firmly just below the lady's shoulder blade. You cannot lead well if your hand is too low and if you hold your partner loosely.

Sometimes, when dancing with a partner who is not familiar with your steps, it is necessary to do a bit of guiding. Then you indicate to your partner with your right hand and arm. The left hand does not help very much in leading.

For the beginner, it is best not to attempt to lead forcibly as only advanced and intricate steps need forceful guiding. The beginner should learn his own part well and he will find his partner will follow without any help if she is a fair dancer.

It is not necessary to count or tell your partner what you intend to do next. By showing your partner that you really know what you are doing, you gain her confidence. She will follow you readily if she has faith in your ability.

Standing correctly and holding your partner in a comfortable position is of great help in leading successfully. Remember to stand erect. Be natural as well as comfortable and not too close to your partner, yet not too far away. At all times, move easily and smoothly. The illustration shows the proper position of the head, arms, hands and body. The lady rests her left hand lightly at the back of the man's shoulder.

The man looks over the lady's right shoulder. The lady may face in the same direction, but it is advisable for her to look over her partner's right shoulder.

The man holds his arms fairly high. Hold your partner firmly, especially with the right arm and hand. Let the lady feel the pressure of your arm at her back (under the shoulder blade, above the waist line), and not have a "jelly fish" hold. (See photograph.) The lady has more confidence in you if you hold her firmly. The left arm is bent at the elbow. Dance on the toes and the balls of the feet. Do not let the heels touch the floor.

To look well while dancing, make yourself tall; hold your head up high, chin in, chest out. Dance as though your body were floating through the air. Keep your legs close together; do not spread them apart.

M. A. Wright and J. H. Painter, two other prohibition officers in the raid are expected to arrange for bonds tomorrow.

FOR A CLEANER CITY To make clear the law pertaining to "Garbage Collection," the ordinance, chapter 45, section 555 is printed herewith in full: Sec. 555. All persons occupying premises in the City of Danville shall cause all refuse and refuse matter of every kind, except ashes (ashes to be in boxes or barrels), about their respective premises, to be collected into and kept in a metal container with a top, and all such tops to be kept on the containers. The containers shall be placed at points easily accessible to the city garbage force at such time as shall be designated by the sanitary department. Men handling garbage shall carry their containers and shall place the tops back on the containers after they have been emptied.

All proprietors of business places shall place trash cans on sidewalk in front of the house of garbage hauling and shall remove from sidewalk within half an hour after same are emptied.

For violation of this ordinance a fine of not less than five or more than ten dollars shall be imposed.

NOTE—The universal use of metallic garbage cans, as required by the above quoted ordinance, will result in helping to—

1. Keep premises more sanitary.

2. Contradict the old breeding by limiting their food supply.

3. Facilitate garbage collection and lessen its labor cost.

4. Give the city a neater appearance.

President Harding Endorses Stone Mountain Project

(By The Associated Press) ATLANTA, Ga., April 20.—President Harding's endorsement of the proposed memorial on Stone Mountain to the heroes of the Confederacy was made public here tonight at a banquet given by the Stone Mountain Memorial Association.

The president, who was in the city on his way to the South, praised the project and extended his best wishes for the success of the undertaking in a letter to Hollins N. Randolph, chairman of the executive committee which was held by Colonel C. O. Sherrill, the president's representative.

Governors of various southern states announced their approval of the project. Governors Frazier of Tennessee and Brandon of Alabama were present at the banquet and backed up the movement as did representatives of the governors of South Carolina, Florida, Virginia and Mississippi.

"It will be one of the world's finest testimonies," President Harding said in his letter, "one of history's most complete avowals, that unity and understanding be brought even into the scene where faction, hatred and hostility have once reigned supreme."

The president's letter follows: "I have received with the greatest pleasure your invitation to the conference on April 24th to discuss plans of the Stone Mountain Memorial to the Confederate Armies. In conditions which would possibly permit, I should unhesitatingly accept for this significant work, certain to rank among the immortal monuments created by men, has always made a special appeal to my imagination. In communicating my proposition, I am confident that I cannot join you on this occasion, I wish at least to express a little of the feeling I have for this wonderful project."

The chairman here explained to me some detail by Mr. Borglum and your committee, to represent in the solid granite of Stone Mountain the assembling of the Confederate Armies. I know of no equally magnificent and ambitious monumental conception. You purpose to represent in the mountain's solid stone, not a group, but an army assembling about its leaders, to set forth there all the great leaders of the southern armies with their men, to accomplish this, an heroic scale has been adopted, requiring that the army shall carry its story in a facade of stone two hundred feet in length by two hundred in height.

The central group, Generals Lee and Jackson, with President Davis, will appear reviewing the moving army. Mr. Borglum tells me that the single figure of General Lee on horseback will probably be from 100 to 125 feet high, a rest in a perspective of similar noble proportions, making an ensemble in which the artistic unit

"Yet even more appealing to me, is the thought that the time has come to our nation when the president may, with the complete concurrence of a united country, and with sincerest approval, share your pleasure and extend his aid in making such a monument possible."

"I have the greatest pleasure in wishing to the people of the South, not only complete success in this great work, but the co-operation they will so well deserve from Americans everywhere."

Lester F. Barlow, of Cleveland, declared that the people of the North would like to assist in financing the undertaking and would like to participate in the movement so essentially southern yet which rightfully belongs to the nation as a whole."

CLUB WOMEN TO CONVEGE IN ATLANTA ATLANTA, April 20.—The "Biennial," the crowning event of every club which woman's life to which she looks forward during the years intervening from one biennial to the next, is to be held this year for the first time in the south, and Atlanta is to be the hostess. The convention will be held from May 7 to 11, and genuine southern hospitality will be dispensed to delegates representing club women and women's affairs from all parts of the world.

Prominent persons in American official and club life are expected to be in Atlanta for the sessions. Among those expected to attend are Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. George Minot Baker, Massachusetts; Mrs. Ross V. S. Barry, Massachusetts; Mrs. Horace M. Towner, Mrs. Percy Panypacker, Anna Steers Richardson, editor of Woman's Home Companion, and Ida Clyde Clarke, of the Pictorial Review.

Among the delegates will be chiefly occupied with federation business of importance, the social side is not to be forgotten, according to plans announced by Mrs. B. M. B. McKin, president of the Biennial Convention, and Mrs. Alcega P. Donald, son, chairman of arrangements. Social entertainments already planned include a "typical southern barbecue," a Southern party on the lawn of the Stone Mountain and a concert at its base, visit to the home of the late Joel

ALL-RUSSIAN

COMMUNISTS

END DEBATE

(By The Associated Press) MOSCOW, April 20.—The All-Russian Communist Party Congress which shapes the policies of the Soviet regime in Russia, wound up two days debate today with the passage of resolutions approving the central committee's policy as outlined by G. S. Zinovieff, its chairman. This included strict adherence to the dictatorship of the proletariat, a strict monopoly on foreign trade, party direction of the economic reconstruction of the country and approval of the export of grain.

The resolution censured any sort of a break in the solid wall of the Soviet's international policy.

Great Lake Rum Trade Stirs Drys

Yellowly Ordered to Put En dto "Scandalous" Situation in Michigan.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Started by reports of a flood of liquor and narcotics from Canada into the United States by way of the Great Lakes, the prohibition enforcement unit moved today to stop the gap.

Ralph Oyler, at present chief of the narcotic division in New York, has been ordered transferred to Cleveland, where a new narcotic division will be established, including Ohio and Michigan, while B. C. Yellowly, former prohibition director of New York, has been ordered to Detroit to take charge of the flying squadron which will operate against the Great Lakes rum runners.

The transfer of Oyler was described by J. L. G. Nutt, head of the narcotic division, as a promotion and recognition of excellent services performed in New York.

Prohibition enforcement officers were loath to discuss the Great Lakes situation, but admit that it is extremely bad. The transfer of Mr. Yellowly to Detroit is understood to be accompanied by a determination on the part of the enforcement division to clean up that State and the entire lake avenue for liquor. Mr. Yellowly's assignment follows a visit made by Commissioner Haynes to Detroit and other Michigan points, where the liquor situation is described as scandalous. He is clothed with drastic powers.

Sleeveless Jackets On Summer Suits

Suits for summer wear are being shown with sleeveless jackets. The dress underneath is usually a simple, one-piece frock with long bell sleeves to match the skirt and a bodice of material to match the lining of the jacket. The suit skirt may be either plain or accented pleated.

The Great Lakes situation has given the enforcement officers even more trouble than the rum running agencies of the Atlantic coast. The large extent of shore line between the two countries makes the task of the revenue officers one of extreme difficulty and, correspondingly, that of the bootlegging fleets unusually easy so long as the use of armed patrols on the lakes is limited by international agreement.

It is even reported there that submarines have been utilized to transport liquor, while the air is supposed to offer another highway for wet goods.

Detroit and the Lake Shore of Ohio are supposed to be the pivotal region of the illicit traffic. Commissioner Haynes is maintaining silence as to the methods that will be used to grapple with the problem, but it is intimated they include machinery which may raise the question of the right of the United States to exercise police power throughout the lake region.

The importation of narcotics by means of the same avenues of approach as a difficulty which has caused perplexity among enforcement officials and one which may call for an appeal to Canada to exercise greater precaution in preventing the importation of drugs into Canada and through Canada into the United States, in the name to public morals and of humanity.

Reports received by the narcotic division show a constantly increasing flood of "dope" into the United States and much of it has been traced to the Great Lakes gateways. Mr. Oyler has authority to organize his division according to his best judgment while the full power of the enforcement division will be placed behind him.

MAYOR HYLAN RAPS MEDIUMS

NEW YORK, Apr. 19.—Mayor Hylan today had a look at the way fake mediums materialize "spirits" and the great masses of people who place their faith in the hereafter still clinging to the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish religions of their fathers. They are good enough for them. No hokum can stir them. No visitors from other shores can belittle or attack the faith of their fathers, and get away with it.

ALEGRETE IS TAKEN

(By The Associated Press)

REYNOLDS, ALBES, April 19.—A Rivera despatch to La Nación says that the state force in Rio Grande do Sul have taken the city of Alegrete, which was abandoned by the revolutionaries after a short fight. The correspondent adds that the government forces are concentrating in the quarry district where the rebels have collected 1,500 men.

WOMEN TO MEET

(By The Associated Press)

BRISTOL, Va., Tenn., April 20.—About forty delegates are expected to be in Bristol Monday for the annual sessions of the women's auxiliary of the Holston Presbytery.

Most of the delegates likely will be from this immediate section. The sessions will begin Monday afternoon and will come to a close Wednesday morning and will be held in the First Presbyterian Church. A number of local pastors are on the program for addresses.

MIAMI, Fla., April 20.—Dr. Eugene F. Elmer, who recently was kidnapped and dragged away to leave Miami, slipped quietly away today, leaving no word as to his destination. It was understood, however, that he intended to leave the country, going probably to England where his father resides.

FEDERAL COAL CONTROL CALLED "PATERNALISM" BY COLUMBUS, O., LAWYER

COLUMBUS, O., April 20.—It would be "paternalism in its worst form" if the Federal Government attempted to fix prices and control distribution of coal, asserted Attorney J. V. Norman, of Louisville, Ky., addressing the Columbus Chamber of Commerce Forum.

The public would be deprived of the benefit of unrestricted competition in the event that the National Coal Commission determined upon means for limiting the capacity of coal mines and the number of miners employed, Attorney Norman said. He asserted that collective bargaining between laborers and employers is proper within limited areas, but "wrong when carried out along national lines."

ATHENS, Ga., April 20.—A verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount of $100,000 was returned here today by a federal court jury, in the case of L. T. Pennick, of the Pennick Warehouse Company, of Madison, Ga., who sued the Camden Insurance Company for the amount of insurance paid on a fire in 1921, when 1,100 bales of cotton are said to have been destroyed.

The insurance company charged fraud in the statement as to the number of bales lost in the fire and that valves to the sprinkler system were cut off before the fire.

Braves Jungle With Powder Puff

BY JOSEPHINE VAN DE GERT (Special to The Bee.)

NEW YORK, April 21.—She conquered darkest Africa with a powder puff!

And now Mrs. Martin Johnson, wife of the explorer and heretofore hunter of big game extraordinary, is going back to give the natives a further taste of Fifth Avenue. Along with the canned salmon and the curried powder which every well-organized expedition carries, Mrs. Johnson will take five evening dresses, six negligees, one complete dinner set of decorated porcelain, six luncheon sets, and enough cold cream, face lotion, perfume, rouges and bath salts to stock the current edition of the Poiles.

For what shall it profit a woman to kill a lion every morning before breakfast if thereby she loses her complexion? queried the prettiest and bravest of big game hunters who have been followed by elephants and who are as feminine and as dainty as when she first sailed down into the South Seas with her husband 14 years ago.

Wherefore, if you are a woman and have an extraordinary ambition to shoot big game, take your own complexion along with you. A complexion is the only thing that will follow you to the far, lonely tips from Mrs. Johnson.

Water is scarce in Africa so stock up with plenty of cold cream.

When preparing for an encounter with a rhino, apply cold cream liberally to the cheeks and chin, delicately with a sponge and dust lightly with your powder.

Repeat the process at the conclusion of the encounter.

Following a fight with a leopard there's nothing like a dash of cold water on the face followed by a gentle application of cold cream. The will maintain a clear and incidentally preserve a free complexion.

An eye-rop together with a solution of salt and water will be found invaluable for clearing the vision and enabling one to distinguish a herd of elephants at a distance.

And when you go off to bed, take a cold cream and a little salt water to wash your face with before you go to bed. It will keep your skin clear and your eyes bright.

Incidentally, of course, Mrs. Johnson

What Makes a Beautiful Girl?

By FLORENZ ZIEGFELD, Jr.

A YOUNG woman walks across the stage. She is very beautiful. She wears a black evening gown which is cut in a deep V in the back, has no sleeves, and is cut very low in the front. She is striking in appearance; the audience looks at no one else while she is on the stage.

Her modiste's name appears on the program. The next day three women call on the modiste, and three more telephone her. They want a black evening gown like the one they saw on the beautiful actress the evening before.

Now, those six women think that they are going to look beautiful in a gown of that design because the actress did. There is a modiste in New York who has built up her success for just that reason.

It seems odd, doesn't it? And it seems even odder that women not only order their gowns in that way, but change the color of their hair that way also. They see a pretty woman on the stage who has blonde hair. They promptly tie them to a hairdresser's and have their bleached.

Beautiful As Natural

When I select girls for one of my productions, it's "Thumbs down" on hair that has acquired its color from the bottle. And I wish that the women who let what they see on the stage govern their appearance would follow the example of the Follies girls in this respect.

There are several reasons why it's best for any girl to let her hair keep its natural color. First of all, it suits her coloring and type better than any other color will. A girl with light brown hair who "touches it up" so that it's very blonde is going to find that her hair makes her face look hard. It won't be becoming. She might far better have it the color it was originally.

There are certain colors of hair that go with certain complexions, and the girl who defies this general scheme of things is going to ruin her appearance and make herself a freak. Of course, we have instances where these general rules do not apply, but unless these exceptions are the work of Nature they are not attractive.

Here are the main classifications:

Complexion	Hair
Blonde	Ash Blonde Chestnut Golden Yellow red
Red	Burning Red Venetian Red
Brunette	Light chestnut Deep chestnut Black chestnut

Women Should Emulate the Leopard.

It's a tradition that the leopard cannot change his spots. Women should follow his example, and not change the color of their crowning glory. As a rule, a woman's hair is the keynote of her color scheme, and if she changes wherever they may lie, and the color of the hair frequently tells what type of a girl is.

For instance, the blonde is likely to be more active physically and to have more endurance than her dark haired companions. Other things being equal. Many good dancers are blondes because they naturally love physical exercise. Light blue, gray or hazel eyes and light hair are usually the marks of the motive type of girl—that is, the girl who is vigorous, very much alive, possessed of the vitality and love of fun that will carry her through a long season and find her as exuberant at the end as at the beginning.

There have been many beautiful blondes in "The Follies."—Marion Davies, Justine Johnston, Ruby de Remer—they are all blondes. There are many in this year's production—Mary Eaton, Allyn King, and many of the girls in the chorus are blondes.

However, this does not mean that brunettes don't make good dancers too, or that they have not the temperament for dancing. Neither Mariel Stryker nor Evelyn Law, two of the well known dancers in this year's "Follies," are blondes.

It is traditional that red haired girls are more fiery of temperament than the others. They are likely to be more original as well.

Dark haired girls if they run true to type are languorous, very charming, very picturesque. They may be fiery too, if they are what we call the Spanish type. As a matter of fact, it is a type that is found everywhere, though of course it predominates in the Latin American countries.

Lady Godiva Passee.

When I am interviewing stage aspirants, I pass judgment not only on the beauty of their hair, but also on the manner in which it is arranged. The important thing is not so much the beauty of the coiffure itself, but the way in which it contributes to the girl's general beauty.

Women used to say enviously, "She can sit on her hair. It's so long!" As a rule, the woman with the very long hair did it very badly; it was so heavy that it pulled back from her forehead, and had to be done in a big, ugly knot at the back of her head. Doubtless the famous Lady Godiva did not do her hair to advantage when it was up.

A sensible girl doesn't care how long or how short her hair is, if she can arrange it so that it makes her better looking. I criticize a girl's hair on the basis that it should be an asset to her beauty first of all, and beautiful in itself second. It should be the girl's crowning glory—not its own.

Recently the heads of a big theatrical firm sent forth an edict forbidding bobbed hair in their productions. "Leave hope behind, all ye who bob your hair!" was the substance of it. They claimed that when a girl bobs her hair she shears off some of her charm at the same time.

Now, bobbed hair suits some girls so perfectly that it doubles their beauty. Many a girl who was merely pretty has been made actually beautiful by bobbing her hair. It seems to me absurd to make a general rule for anything so individual as the manner in which a woman arranges her hair.

How Do You Do Your Hair?

An individual manner of doing the hair, if it is especially becoming to the girl who tries it, cannot fail to attract attention. Therefore there have been times when girls who have come to apply for positions in one of my productions have been successful because they knew how to do their hair so that it made them more striking looking than they would have been otherwise.

Individuality of appearance is important, of course. You yourself know how your attention is instantly attracted to a girl whose appearance is a bit unusual. It is unusual beauty that I am always seeking, and the girl who can make her beauty unusual is going to be noticed by me just as quickly as she is by anyone else—perhaps quicker, because my eye has been trained to recognize beauty. If I realize that she has added to her appearance by doing her hair well, I give her credit for just that much more intelligence, than it would otherwise be apparent that she had.

Now, I do not mean that freakish coiffures are attractive, to should be encouraged—far from it! But I do mean that the unusual coiffure that is particularly well suited to a girl's face is the one for her to adopt. Every really beautiful woman has learned what is the most becoming way to do her hair.

Every woman should study the shape of her face and head, and try different methods of arranging her hair until she finds out which one improves not only her face, but the shape of her head as well.

Perhaps her nose is a trifle too long; if so, her hair should be done very flat in the back, to remedy the defect when her face is seen in profile. Perhaps her nose is too short, and she needs a knot of hair at the back of her head to make it seem longer. If the face is too short, the hair can be done to make it seem longer, and similarly, the face that is too long can be shortened if the hair is done flat on top and drawn down low on the forehead.

Many women hide the really beautiful shape of their heads by the way they do their hair. That is one reason why bobbed hair should be advocated, if it is becoming. Bobbed hair, unless it is very fuzzy and stands out from the head, lets the shape of the head be seen. Few women can afford to discard any of the claims to beauty that Nature has bestowed on her. Being beautiful is largely just presenting a beautiful picture to those who look at you, and if the curve of the back of the head is beautiful, the hair certainly should not be bunched up in the back so that this curve does not show.

Few things are more easily changed than the way in which a woman does her hair—and few things will make a more radical change in a woman's appearance than will a change in her coiffure.

Gaze upon Lynn Van Voorhees' who has one of the most distinctive coiffures in the "Greenwich Village Follies."

The Spurned Beauty and the Wall Street Crash

The Far-Reaching Events That Followed the Melodramatic Pledge of Nellie Black's Attorney That He Wouldn't Rest Until the Man She Accuses of Breach of Promise Goes to Jail.

Nellie Black, Fuller's Cast-off "Plaything," Now Regarded as the Nemesis Who Brought About the $3,000,000 Failure That Affected 10,000 Investors.

By Winifred Van Duzer

COMPENSATION, maintain the students of psychic research, governs all things. Every action, right or wrong, every word, every thought that impresses itself upon the tissue of human sensibility sets up an eternal balance; good for good; evil for evil. And though the law may not be fulfilled for years and years, it always is the same in the end.

Seven years ago, as he sat at a table in the astonishing old Knickerbocker Hotel grill, Edward M. Fuller first saw Nellie Black. She was nineteen then; those who know her best talk of her sweetness and innocence and her eagerness for adventure.

Fuller was nearly twice her age and the newness of adventure lay behind him. But like many who have walked too closely and long with life, he was intrigued by what she represented—youth and the ability to look forward.

So Fuller wooed and won Nellie Black. He offered her the adventure she craved. And he also offered her irreparable wrong. For no wedding ring went with his love.

Now the problem offered students of psychic research for solution is this: Has the misfortune that dogs the footsteps of the wealthy and worldly-wise broker come about purely as compensation for wrong done a twisting, inexperienced girl?

Or is the wrong to be balanced in some other manner at some other time in a bigger way, while his troubles of the past year or two are merely the expression of a state of mind he has bred in Nellie Black?

For it is certain that those troubles—accusations, exposure, bankruptcy, and the menace of the law—have been brought about by the girl.

Caste rules America as it does India. Social strata are defined as the layers in Neapolitan ice cream; but unlike India, our own social system runs to strata within strata. Thus there is an aristocracy in the half-world, and a middle class and a lower class, but this latter is the under-world.

Back in the old days when Broadway scintillated with the thin, gold bubbles that rise to the surface of thin, gold wine, the most glittering, gorgeous caravanserai of all the white light refuges was that which stood at the very heart of the blazing district. A set of stately rooms decorated with the art of Maxfield Parrish and hung with crystal chandeliers like decorations from a fabled ice palace and fitted with little tables that somehow managed to surround themselves with an atmosphere of aloofness.

It was in this Knickerbocker grill that the aristocracy of the demi-monde foregathered of an evening; brokers, bankers, dancers; men of wealth and women of beauty. Introductions were managed with extreme propriety and the hand of Fate linked some life-threads and snipped others off short, but the pattern it wove was always one of startling color and weird design.

Edward M. Fuller, Whose Indictment for Bucketing Brought Forth the Phrase from Miss Black's Attorney That Fuller Had Been "A Cheater All His Life."

Louise Groody, Musical Comedy Actress, a Bride Who Suddenly Discovered That Her Husband, William Francis McGee, Had a Police Record.

Thus the linking and weaving and the strange pattern that united the lives of Edward M. Fuller and Nellie Black. Years later, when their association was grinding through the mill of the law, it was said that he had moved into New York from nobody seemed to know where eighteen years before. Five years later he was heard of as "Harry Dexter," when he was arrested on charge of obtaining money for the purpose of building a mythical home for aged journalists. He had interviewed the manager of a hotel which is a residence for an element of the staid old aristocracy of Manhattan, and obtained $50 as a remagazine operated by a man whose name was nearly enough like that of a famous newspaper publisher to mislead capitalists who bought stock in it. At an investigation by the Grand Jury which sent the magazine into bankruptcy, Fuller was described as "an associate of criminals," and it wasn't long afterward that he was "wanted" by the District Attorney on charge of taking part in an oil swindle.

It was later that he formed a partnership with William F. McGee, also said to have a police record, and organized the brokerage firm of E. M. Fuller & Co. They became important figures on Wall Street and Fuller enjoyed powerful political influence. But while his firm was a member of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, he never was suit. When he was not convicted his picture was ordered removed from the collection at police headquarters.

Fuller next turned up as promoter of the "Satire," a magazine operated by a man whose name was nearly enough like that of a famous newspaper publisher to mislead capitalists who bought stock in it. At an investigation by the Grand Jury which sent the magazine into bankruptcy, Fuller was described as "an associate of criminals," and it wasn't long afterward that he was "wanted" by the District Attorney on charge of taking part in an oil swindle.

It was later that he formed a partnership with William F. McGee, also said to have a police record, and organized the brokerage firm of E. M. Fuller & Co. They became important figures on Wall Street and Fuller enjoyed powerful political influence. But while his firm was a member of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, he never was able, even with the extreme pressure he instigated, to obtain tickers from the New York Stock Exchange.

And it was as the senior member of the E. M. Fuller Co. that the soldier of fortune met and wooed and won Nellie Black in the Knickerbocker grill seven years ago.

The alliance without the law is as it is; precarious first, peace-disturbing always, sometimes miserable, sometimes destructive as the hand of Satan.

Nellie Black appeared in the glittering haunts of Broadway, a new figure. No forward-looking toward adventure now! Rather sophisticated pleasure in the name she had won of "Pink Pajamas Girl," by dashing in and out of her love-nest apartment in an exclusive neighborhood on Riverside Drive—to the horror of nearby residents.

Finally there must have come a day of reckoning between Nellie and her sweetheart. What brought it about, what words were said, what accusations, tears, denunciations made it hideous only these two know. Apparently they decided it to be the place where trails divided.

When next their strange association came to the notice of the public, Fuller was having Nellie arrested for disorderly conduct. He claimed that she invaded his office in Wall Street and threatened to shoot him if he did not give her some money she declared he had promised.

After her trial and suspended sentence, Broadway began to talk about the breach of promise suit Nellie had brought against Fuller after her first indignation, as she claimed, that he was married and not her common law husband as she thought. Her attorney told the circumstances of that suit.

"After Miss Black had sued Fuller for breach of promise, Arnold Rothstein, the gambler and Fuller's friend, called on her and said he would give her $10,000 to call the suit off. He tricked her into a consent release without giving her the full amount. He gave her a check for $5000, made out by Mrs. Rothstein. When she asked for the other $5000 he laughed at her and taunted her for signing the release."

It was to collect this second $5000 that Miss Black went to his office with the threat to shoot, according to the story she told.

Now of course this temperamental visit had no direct connection with the subsequent failure of E. M. Fuller & Co. At least, when it was all over and the world knew that ten thousand investors had been caught in the failure, this was the announcement the Broadway-Wall Street character made to the world. He declared that he had lost a million and a half in "Mex Pete" when he sold short.

However, it was generally agreed throughout the financial district of the city that without the bright light of publicity and speculation having been turned upon the firm by her action, Fuller might have weathered the storm as he had weathered others.

As it was, the clientele of the Fuller house was threatened with an aggregate loss of $3,000,000. Liabilities of the Chicago branch of the house alone were put at $1,250,000 with only a few thousand dollars of assets. There were seven branches.

The result of the first trial of Fuller, charged with bucketing orders, was a disagreement. The jury stood nine for conviction. Assistant-District Attorney Nelson O'Leary immediately promised another trial on the same indictment, and called attention to the eleven other indictments still outstanding against Fuller.

William F. McGee, his partner in the firm, faced thirteen indictments. McGee started Broadway last February when he slipped over to Greenwich, Ct., and married Louise Groody, the musical comedy actress.

It was while the trial in which Fuller was described as a "cheater all his life" was proceeding that George R. Simpson, attorney for Miss Black, had a short but significant statement to make:

"The failure was the result of my promise to Miss Black and Fuller's lawyer that I would not rest until I saw Fuller in jail."

And Nellie Black smiled as she listened, and approved the statement with the fatalism which is part of the particular stratum of the particular world in which she lives.
